

[Music plays throughout video][Photo of mountains, palm trees and small buildings]
[In May of 2014, through Spartans Without Borders, a group of MSU Bailey Scholars ventured to San Ignacio, Belize.] [Photo of pyramid] Their goal was to gain cultural experience while making a difference at the same time. [Photo of group of women]
They spent time working on leadership and small business skills with the women of Mary Open Doors Women's Resource Center. [Photo of pieces of paper attached to wall with letters and words written on them] [Photo of banner with logo and "Serving Women and Children"] [Photo of women standing in a circle] Throughout their time together, the women and Bailey Scholars bonded in a way they never imagined. [Photo of women holding certificates and Spartan S flag][Photo of school children in classroom] They also spent time at the Hills of Promise Primary School.
[Photo of MSU students and children] Here the scholars not only tutored the children, they became fully immersed in the school. [Photo of group of teachers] Before they left, the teachers performed a farewell song they had written. [Video of teachers singing words not understandable] [Photo of MSU students and children]
[Photo of child praying] [Photo of children sitting at desks] [Video of children clapping and teachers singing and man playing guitar][Photo of children running] [Photo of group of children outside] [Photo of children with Jessica] [Video of teachers singing and waving] [Photo of children holding Spartan S flag with MSU
students] [Photos of MSU student hugging children] [Video of teachers singing] [Live, Learn, Latin America western hemisphere globe graphic] [For more information visit latinamerica.isp.msu.edu western hemisphere globe graphic] [Edited by Jessica Lundquist graphic of western hemisphere globe]