Dear Colleagues,

As a newcomer to Michigan State University, I am happy for this opportunity to welcome you to the 2009 Latin American and Caribbean Studies Undergraduate Research Conference, Democracy, Development and Equity in Latin America and the Caribbean. This interdisciplinary conference, now in its 6th year, provides undergraduate students with a unique opportunity to share their learning and discuss their ideas with the greater-university community. As a result, the conference has grown. It is our largest one, revealing hard work and synthesis by student presenters from 11 colleges.

We are particularly honored to welcome our distinguished guest, Ambassador Alexandre Addor-Neto, Secretary for Multidimensional Security for the Organization of American States. Beyond its timeliness, Ambassador Addor-Neto’s Keynote Address—Security, Democracy and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean: Old and New Challenges—constitutes a fulcrum on which to predicate future alliances in the America’s and beyond.

I am pleased to become the new Director for the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies, and I am indebted to Dr. Laurie Medina for her superb leadership as Acting Director. Accolades by many are merited for Laurie’s vital service and her success in ensuring a smooth transition.

I look forward to getting to know the faculty, students and colleagues in International Studies and Programs and the larger MSU community, starting with this conference!

Sincerely,
Participants

Security, Democracy and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean: Old and New Challenges

Ambassador Alexandre Addor-Neto
Secretary for Multidimensional Security
Organization of the American States (OAS)

Following the Summit of the Americas, where Heads of State and Government, including President Barack Obama, will discuss greater security in the Americas, Ambassador Alexandre Addor-Neto, Secretary for Multidimensional Security at the Organization of American States, is set to speak on the same topic at MSU. The Ambassador’s presentation will begin at 3 p.m. on Wednesday, April 22 on the third floor of the International Center.

“The concept of security, once framed largely in conventional military terms, must be expanded to take into account a range of evolving threats - transnational organized crime, in its different manifestations, such as drug trafficking, money laundering, illegal arms dealing, trafficking in persons, criminal gangs, institutional corruption, and international terrorism” says Ambassador Alexandre Addor-Neto. “In some countries, poverty, disease, the lack of opportunity and hope and environmental degradation increase vulnerability and help undermine human security.”

Although the Americas have been cooperating on security issues for more than a century, there are different perspectives regarding threats and priorities in different countries. Globalization has elevated awareness in the differences as well as a growing concern in connections between security, development and democracy. “Not only are these three goals connected, security has become a prerequisite for development and the consolidation of democracy” says Addor-Neto.

Ambassador Addor-Neto is the current secretary for multidimensional security at the Organization of American States. During his diplomatic career service, Addor-Neto has served as the Consul General of Brazil in Chicago, Ambassador to Angola, and Minister Counselor at the Embassy in Moscow. He has also worked in the Ministry of External Relations in Brasilia on consular, economic and regional political issues, as well as on diplomatic planning.
